Choices Prevents Mental Health Crises Requiring Hospital or Residential Care

THE CHOICES PROGRAM

Program participants are diverted from placement in a more restrictive institutional setting to the CHOICES day treatment program following a mental health crisis.

In participation with staff, CHOICES program participants identify their desired treatment outcomes and receive an individualized treatment plan which leverages the clients' own personal strengths in managing their mental health symptoms.

Participants attend daily groups and activities that emphasize dialectical and cognitive behavioral therapies, mindfulness practices, relapse prevention, symptom management, medication education, emotional regulation, physical fitness and connection to community and peers. Therapies are designed to improve clients' daily functioning and social skills, which aids in the recovery process and improved mental health.

A PEER-BASED RECOVERY MODEL

Participants in the CHOICES program connect directly with peers who can relate to and understand their mental health concerns in a non-judgmental supportive environment. In addition, peers who have experience in recovery work for the CHOICES program and serve as role models and teachers for CHOICES clients.
